You may not be aware that learndirect scotland produces a wide range of publications. As one of our partner organisations we think that these may be of particular interest to you.

The materials include Learning Principles papers which cover topics such as motivation, barriers to learning, learning styles and transition, as well as specialist topics including, numeracy and work-based learning.

You can also access e-learning in action across Scotland which highlights, through a series of case studies, just some of the solutions that have been put into practice in the public, private and voluntary sectors.

To complement the e-learning information you can also request e-learning games which could help you to introduce people to e-learning. These can be ordered by calling 01738 633 322.

And if you're not sure about everything we do and would like to find out more about our products and services just click here.
